‘X-Factor’

Leadership through advocacy

My nature and my developed professional personality type is to commit passionately to, and achieve objectives, by agitating and influencing as an advocate and advisor at an executive level, through the use of well-developed argument and negotiation based on credible data and information. I call this leadership through advocacy.